Part B: Read the story. Answer the questions.

The ship was very crowded, cold, and uncomfortable, and the sea was rough. They sailed over the water for months. Finally the passengers saw land, but it was all rocks and bare ground. It was November and very cold. Captain Myles Standish and some of the Pilgrim men went ashore to see if they could find any houses or white people. They found some huts and some corn buried in holes in the ground. They saw some Native Americans, but they ran away from the Pilgrims. They finally found a pretty place to live, and all the families got off the ship at a spot now called Plymouth Rock in the state of Massachusetts.
